Joey,

Here are the rough stats I put together after talking to Bob Havemeister.

-The avg. dairy farmer produces 6000lb milk per day

-6000lbs=706 gallons

-Mat Maid pays farmers 21.08 per hundred weight

-1,264.80 per day to farmers

-that equates to 1.79 per gallon produced

-461,652.00 per year to each farmer

-2,308,260.00 paid to all farmers

-Approx. 1,288,450 gallons produced yearly by the five dairies.

-At a retail price of 4.79 gallon, equals 6,171,675.00 per year gross

-Since Alaskan milk only comprises about 28% of the Mat Maid product, multiply gallons of Alaskan milk by 3.5 (imported milk) and you get 21,600,864.00 total gross (of course this is using the 4.79 per gallon price and prices vary at different locations)

-Mat Maids wholesale price to retailers in March was around 4.00 per gal. (I know it was 4.14 for convience stores, less at big stores). That price has probably gone up in the last few months.

Conclusion: If Mat Maid were to go to a 100% Alaskan made product, wholesale it at 4.00 per gallon, the gross after paying the farmers would be 2,845,540.00. The question is, is that enough to sustain a small scale plant? If the wholesale price went up to 5.00 per gallon, gross would go up to 4,133,990.00. We are only talking liquid milk here.

Keep in mind that the dairies have their own problems. Some are debt free and others owe hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Note! These are not all official stats so don't publicly quote them. They're based on some rough figures given to me.

It will be interesting when you see their books.

A break from AGIA....Mat Maid, the visit, the truth

Posted: June 16, 2007 - 3:01 pm

Much has been written about Governor Palin's visit to the Matanuska Maid Dairy and how she was spurned from taking a tour.

What you didn't hear about was the actual behind the scenes events which took place.

June 13,2007

10:00am - The Governor's Office calls Mat-Maid and requests a tour of the plant. They are told by employees that the plant manager is gone and the only person authorized to give tours, the CEO, is at a well publicized board meeting. It is suggested they reschedule for later.

11:00am - Kris Perry from the Governor's Office calls and announces that Governor Palin will be there at noon. Perry is told once again that there will be noone there authorized to give a tour. Mat-Maid is told it is will just be a few people.

11:30am - Unable to reach the CEO on his cell phone because he is in the middle of a presentation to the creamery board, the CEO's wife fields a frantic phone call from the office.

11:45am - The CEO's wife in her car arrives at the Westmark Hotel where she slips a note to the CEO. The public session has just begun and the CEO is unable to leave until he is finished with Q &A. He instructs his office to make the governor as comfortable as possible in the conference room until he can break away.

Noon - The Governor arrives with a large entourage of people, including her husband Todd, daughter Piper, DNR officials, staff and security. Also in tow is several media outlets.

Todd Palin becomes agitated and asks the Mat-Maid employees "are you telling me you won't let the Governor of Alaska tour this facility?"

12:30pm - The CEO finally breaks away from the meeting and calls his office to inform them he is 7 or 8 minutes away from the plant.

Back at Mat-Maid, the Governor decides to wait no longer and leaves before the CEO arives.

Prediction - Next week a new creamery board will be appointed and the head will be Robert Gottstein who has also been recently awarded a grant for $475,000 from the federal government to open a milk bottling plant in Palmer.

Fact - Did you know that over the last 20 years, Matanuska Maid in an effort to support Alaskan Grown have paid Alaskan Dairy Farmers roughly $4 million dollars more for locally produced milk than they paid for milk imported from outside Alaska?

Much more on this story to come.
